

Music Ambassadors

"We are the music makers, and we are the dreamers of dreams" –
Arthur O'Shaughnessy

Who Are They?

Our Music ambassadors are a group of children who act as passionate advocates for the power of music in our lives. They help to promote a range of classical, contemporary and popular music across the school. They listen and encourage children to feel confident about creating and performing music. The Music Ambassadors regularly meet with the staff music team, to discuss and share new ideas and plan musical events during the year.

What They Do?

Our music ambassadors promote musical learning and performance throughout the school. They encourage and support the younger year groups during singing assemblies and are often committed members of the St. Aloysius Choir. They take on a position of responsibility to make sure that there is a thriving culture of music across the school.

How They Make A Difference?

- Promote music across the school
- Make music inclusive for all children
- Check music equipment and monitoring instruments
- Enjoy learning and finding out about music new and old.
- Organise music competitions and events
- Choose and manage music and hymns to be played in assemblies
- Encourage and supporting others to play and perform
- Compere at orchestral concerts
- Set up music for assemblies and other events
